One day, Mother Hippo brought a new doll for Happy Hippo.

Happy Hippo loved her new, beautiful doll.

She dressed the doll up and carried it around with her everywhere.

The next day, Bush Baby wanted to play with Happy Hippo's doll.

Akili also wanted to play with Happy Hippo's doll.

Little Lion wanted to play with Happy Hippo's doll too.

But there was only one doll, and it belonged to Happy Hippo. Happy Hippo wanted to play with her beautiful, new doll.

What should Happy Hippo do?

No fighting please!

Happy Hippo had an idea!
“Let’s all play with the doll
together,” said Happy Hippo.
“We can be the doll’s family.”

They had so much fun.
Do you know what they played?

They played family!

Happy Hippo pretended to be the doll's mother.
Little Lion pretended to be the doll's father.

Akili pretended to be the doll's sister, and
Bush Baby pretended to be the doll's brother.

They bathed and dressed the doll.

They fed the doll different kinds of foods.

They sang and read stories to the doll.

They even took the doll to different places.

Oh! They had so much fun sharing the doll and playing together.
